French Today

French Today is dedicated to teaching modern French as it is actually spoken. What is taught in most schools and methods today is not how the French truly speak and, as such, will not help you in real conversations.

Created in 2009 by a husband and wife team, Camille and Olivier, French Today sells 20+ professionally recorded audiobooks and features an extensive 500+ article blog on language and culture in France. Additionally, there are more than 200 hours of recorded audio available for download – that’s a serious amount of content.

“French is an evolving language and traditional methods won’t help you communicate in today’s French”
– Camille Chevalier, French language expert

Born and raised in Paris, Camille has been teaching French to adults for more than 20 years in the United States, France, and around the world through Skype. She is also responsible for writing and recording all of French Today’s audiobooks,

In a unique approach, the audiobooks initially focus on conversation, rather than complex rules and conjugations. By first developing your core structure, you’ll be able to build good French pronunciation and useful real world vocabulary, according to Camille.

Learn whilst following a real novel containing real characters who evolve in real life situations. Both the method and the companion novel stories are recorded at three different speeds: slow for you to specifically focus on the sounds, normal (with the proper glidings) and street French to build up your ear for the real thing.

Best of all, the audiobooks will work across most devices, on desktop and mobile, and include handy PDF text transcripts for you to follow along with.

With more than 370+ positive certified customer reviews and a 120-day money back on all products sold through their online store, French Today are putting their money where their mouth is. If you’ve been looking to learn the “language of love”, there is no better time to start than right now.
