

Case Study

Astera | Garnet Enterprises

Garnet Enterprises automates PDF data extraction with Astera, saving time and costs.

Background

Garnet Enterprises is a long-established hardware wholesaler and retailer based in Mackay, Queensland. They generate a wide variety of data through transaction records, purchase orders, customer information, and more. This data is crucial for performing analysis, maintaining historical records, and generating business insights from multiple sources and destinations. As the company grew, they needed to optimize their data extraction process and minimize the time spent on manual tasks.

Use Case

Before adopting Astera, Garnet Enterprises relied on manual data entry, which was time-consuming and labor-intensive. This manual process limited their ability to generate advanced or custom reports, and as the company grew, the need for a more efficient solution became clear. They switched to Monarch, which helped pull data from reports into Microsoft Access. However, the rising costs of Monarch soon became too expensive to justify.

They needed a cost-effective and efficient tool to extract raw data from PDFs and import it directly into their databases, streamlining the process for faster and more efficient analysis and reporting.
