The thing I love about ProjectManager.com is being able to check the status of projects and identify and resolve issues quickly.

International Facilities Managed Right

The International Facility Management Association (IFMA) was founded in 1980 and is the largest organization of its kind, with over 24,000 members in more than 100 countries and 37 billion square feet of property. It’s mission is to “globally advance and support the practice of facility management.”

For its own projects, IFMA needed a software tool that gave them ongoing visibility into the daily progress of their projects and their teams.

“ProjectManager.com is easy to use and it just works,”says Brian Breul, IT Manager. “We use ProjectManager.com on a day-to-day basis to see where task completion is at. That helps us to see where the project is.”

Brian’s team relies on real-time visibility and ability to drill-down into the details of tasks and issues, too. “One of the best features is the dashboard,” he adds, “where we can see at-a-glance is the project ahead of schedule, on schedule or behind schedule.”

“One of the things I like about ProjectManager.com is their customer service. I know I’m going to get a really fast response to any issue or question I ask.”
