Tourism Authority of Panama website

The Panamanian Tourism Authority (ATP) is in charge of looking over all touristic activity in the country and has the goal of promoting financial and sustainable growth through the diversification of touristic sources all over the country.

We migrated the ATP's website to a more modern and flexible platform in Drupal 7.

For this development, we had to consult with the National Authority for Government Innovation (AIG) because the website had to go hand in hand with the ATP's needs and the AIG's requirements. First, we planned the migration process from the previous system to the new one and then with the guidelines provided by the AIG we designed and programmed a suitable web theme.

This website is integrated with the ATP's Youtube channel and it categorizes news with the use of taxonomies. At last, we installed the website on the AIG's servers.

We're proud to mention that this is the first governmental website with responsive web design, the website will automatically accommodate its design and content layout for the visitor's screen.
