

Improved staff communication with intranet solutions

A custom intranet for Ubico waste management services

As many employees went home during the Covid-19 crisis, they needed remote access to documents and processes. Public sector provider Ubico had a head start with their bespoke staff intranet. An intranet is a private version of the internet that sits behind a login so only key users like staff can view it.

Ubico was formed by a partnership of local councils to deliver waste management, landscaping and other public services to residents in Gloucestershire and West Oxfordshire. With depots and offices across the region, their staff were already spread apart. They needed a secure, centralised system for HR documents, policy guidance, and internal news.

Staff can login with any internet-connected device. So there is no need for additional equipment or software installation, and the system is instantly familiar to anyone who's used a website.
