

DIGITIZATION AND CONVERSION OF FINANCIAL INFORMATION FOR A FRENCH RESEARCHER

The Client

Flatworld Solutions was contacted by a researcher from the French university. The client was collecting and analyzing financial information from the 1950s. The client needed a partner that could assist them with reviewing over 100 different financial books in online (but not editable) formats, and wanted that information extracted and collated according to their exact specifications.

The company found Flatworld Solutions online, and was impressed by our years of domain experience and the ability to meet their requirements within their budget. They selected to use Flatworld Solutions for the project.

The Problems

The primary challenge was the sheer size of the scope. There were over 100 different books and 1000 different companies that were to be analyzed. Since the books were not editable, there was a significant amount of manual data entry to be done, which in turn had the potential to introduce manual error.

There was also no methodology in place for extracting the information, so the Flatworld Solutions team had to determine the most appropriate and efficient methodology possible.

The Solutions

First, the Flatworld Solutions team created an indexing system to facilitate extraction of the information in a much more efficient, detailed, and accurate manner. We also put a team in place to review the quality of the manually entered data and ensure it was accurately recorded.

The Results

This project had its own unique requirements which were not seen in any of the previous assignments at Flatworld Solutions. It involved a team of experts with a working knowledge of European languages to correctly identify and enter all of the data from the online financial books. Yet, in the end, the client was highly satisfied with the results. After the project was over, the client gladly sent more work to the Flatworld Solutions team.
