L.A. Weekly is an essential guide covering where to go, where to eat, and what to do in Los Angeles, CA.

It's the most widely-read alt-weekly in the United States, with a loyal audience of over 4 million active users visiting the site each month. Both print and online editions feature articles filled with hot tips, dining reviews, concert and nightlife picks, and pictorials by L.A.'s best photographers.

The L.A. Weekly has won more awards from the Association of Alternative Newsmedia than any other publication in the U.S. In 2007, it became the first newspaper to be awarded the Pulitzer Prize for restaurant criticism.
