

Strike Publications

Meet Strike Publications

Service: Virtual Private Server

Strike Publications began as a publications company in 1989 to publish a newspaper for the RAAF Base at Amberley near Ipswich. Over time the company has evolved to produce three full colour, full gloss magazine titles covering Ipswich lifestyle (IpswichLife); Defence family lifestyle, careers and resettlement into civilian life (DefenceLife); and a national Defence capabilities magazine (DefenceToday).

"We have websites for each magazine along with the corporate website, which are critical to communicating with potential clients (advertisers) and readers, as the websites serve as a resource that profiles the business and its print media products.

The logo for Strike Publications, featuring the word "STRIKE" in large, bold, blue capital letters, and the word "publications" in smaller, green, lowercase letters below it.

"Our decision to host with Conetix was based on being able to partner with a like-minded team of professionals whose business aspirations and practices complement and enhance our own objectives. They have enabled our business to develop highly visible and interactive websites, without any technical problems or downtime,"

– John, Managing Editor

The vision for Strike Publications is to migrate to a web-based user interface for most applications and cloud storage of data modules.

Conetix has proudly partnered with Strike Publications for over 10 years.

<http://www.strikepublications.com.au>