As a consultant, I have used many different tools to capture and manage requirements. Elements by far is the easiest yet comprehensive tool I have used to manage this process, and I recommend it to everyone I can!

There are a few Salesforce Apps that we can all argue might be beneficial for almost all Salesforce orgs. But I truly 100% think that the one app that can work in every single Salesforce org without debate is Elements.cloud.

As a Salesforce Consultant much of the job is gathering requirements, with documentation and diagrams. The power here is that it is built with metadata at the core of your process mappings/diagrams. No one doing process mapping for Salesforce should be using any other tool.

Then you have impact analysis. I can spend hours talking about this and why everyone SHOULD be using it. You can see what changing, adding, removing things will impact. Fixes are 500% faster (not sure exactly, I just made that number up....but faster). Remove chances of breaking anything if something is changed and you didn't realize what it would affect.
