“With the camera on your phone you can scan the four fingers on one hand. The fingerprints, or the lines and marks on your fingers, are then converted into code. That's actually a kind of passwords. The goal of the new method is to make payments easier, more user-friendly and above all, safer. The prints of four fingers are a lot safer than a [single] fingerprint.”

DAVID VAN DAMME
BUNQ

“Passwords are the main method to control access to information. They don't work very well. Everybody forgets them. People write them down on Post-It notes. They get stolen in breaches. They get stolen in phishing scams.”

MARTIN MCCOURT
FORMER EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT, GEMALTO

“Passwords are the easiest approach for attackers. People tend to use passwords that are easy to remember and therefore easy to compromise.”

FRANK SWAIN

“From a security standpoint, passwords by their nature are bad. Going passwordless is a win-win. It's better for the user: they don't need to remember a password so it's easier for them to sign in to everything. On the other hand, it's also much more secure.”

MATHIAS IGNBERG
SERVICE MANAGER, IDENTITY & ACCESS MANAGEMENT
AND CLOUD, BOLIDEN

“With YubiKey, strong security policies are possible because it is a product specially made for security. Even if a YubiKey is lost, it does not become a security incident because no sensitive data is contained on the YubiKey itself.”

TAKAO YOSHIDA
GENERAL MANAGER, CUSTOMER SUPPORT
DEPARTMENT, NETWORK SECURITY DIVISION, SCSK
CORPORATION

“Our customers have been incredibly receptive to the YubiKey and the EZSmartCard partnership. Every time we have an installation, it stays installed. So, our retention rate is fantastic.”

TOMMY MCMASTER
MARKETING, KEYTOS

“With the YubiKey, you just press a button and you're in, which makes it so easy for people who don't want to retype passcodes.”
