Electronic Signature Software Category

Electronic signature (e-signature) software enables you to collect signatures on digitally shared documents, and removes the need to use physical documents to gather signatures. The platform allows you to distribute legally sensitive documents to collect e-signatures. Organizations use it to encrypt documents like employment paperwork and sales contracts for which employee, partner, or client signatures are needed.

E-signature software allows both senders and recipients to sign documents on a range of devices and operating systems. You can encrypt and secure shared documents and communications with other users. Plus, you can track document status and inform users about required actions such as signing, approving, etc. For security, you can define permission rights and user roles for both internal and external users (customers, partners, contractors etc.). Finally, most platforms provide document creation and storage features or integrate with tools that provide these functionalities.

“True to its Name! As a Sales Professional in the Enterprise Telecom world, the terms “feet on street” and “mobile office” truly come to life. I remember a time when a customer called on a Friday evening wanting a signed copy of the Purchase Order without which they could not process the payment. The quarter was closing on Saturday, a non-working day, which meant that if the signed document would not reach the client, my target for...”

PRASHANT BUTANI
CLIENT MANAGER, CABLE & WIRELESS WORLDWIDE

“I find Signeasy very useful and user-friendly. It has simplified our processes significantly, especially in handling documents like changes in salary, category changes, and terminations. One great feature is the ability to send reminders, which helps in urgent situations where documents must be signed promptly.”
