EDI Software Category

EDI (Electronic Data Interchange) software facilitates data exchange and transfer between multiple computers. This platform is utilized for speedy transfer of business files within enterprises and between company partners, like customers or suppliers. It can translate widely used file types into an integrated format and offer templates for a standard format utilized in transfers.

IT teams in production companies and healthcare organizations typically use EDI software to simplify and streamline document transfers and daily communications. EDI tools help to replace postal mail, fax, and email in many scenarios. These applications are often leveraged in tandem with a data integration system that gathers data from several sources in the cloud or on-premise.

" *GoAnywhere has given FPS GOLD added flexibility. We have created templates for each type of transfer that we do, which lets us set up a new transfer in about 15 minutes. The customizability of the GoAnywhere product allowed us to create templates that fit nicely into our internal processes. One of the nicest features of the transfer configuration is the ability to test connectivity and see the directories on the other side while in the middle of the setup.
