Customer Success Report

Corporate Learning Management Software (LMS) Category

A Corporate Learning Management System (LMS) helps a company to organize all its training materials. It can therefore be compared to a corporate intranet. These solutions focus on information storage, distribution, and sharing. For instance, if you make a video course on how to market your firm's products, each video can be made part of a standard learning track. The LMS can guide users throughout the track and help to evaluate their learning.

A Corporate LMS can also offer useful information such as calling scripts, customer success playbooks, product details, and more. In short, the platform provides a centralized location to store info and helps the enterprise focus on learning and development.

“Kallidus is an enterprise wide LMS with the broad range of functionality that we needed. For it to support a variety of e-learning types including self-authored and generic content was important, as well as facilitating classroom training. We also have a large number of internal accreditations, so to have the functionality to manage these within the LMS is great. And ultimately Kallidus is cost effective, which is critical at a time when training budgets are decreasing.”
